Excerpt from POSIE PIXIE AND THE FIREWORKS PARTY - Book 4 in the Whimsy Wood Series

TAP TING TAPPITY - TING ! went Mr Bilberry the blackbirds beak on Posie Pixies copper kettle house one wet November morning . Mr Bilberry (or Bill as he preferred) was Whimsy Woods postman . The job of delivering mail to the woodland folk had been in his family for generations and he wore his black , shiny postman's cap with pride .

Morning Posie ! he trilled down the spout slide into Posies copper kettle house .

I've got a leaf letter here for you .

Good morning to you too Bill ! I'll be there in a jiffy , she called back cheerily .

A few minutes later , Posie popped out of her dock leaf front door , wearing a pine cone printed apron over her purple pixie tunic and leggings and holding a rather sticky wooden spoon .

Sorry to keep you waiting Bill , said Posie as she brushed some apple peel from her jingling , tinkling bluebell hat .

I've been busy making spiced apple chutney for the winter .

Aaaah Makes me think of Christmas-time as a fledgling , twittered Mr Bilberry .
